Elagitanins are large fat molecules found in the fruit and seeds of many fruits. When eating the elagitanins are changed by the stomach acids into elagic acid. Elagic acid works in many wonderful ways.

1. As an antioxidant, it neutralizes cell damaging free radicals
2. It protects the p53 gene. Most cancers are caused by damage to this gene.
3. It protects DNA from the mutations that cause cancer
4. It inhibits the viral enzyme integrase

It is known that if the phase I enzyme system is stimulated oxidative damage may be promoted or magnified however, if the phase II system is preferentially stimulated breakdown of chemical carcinogens occurs. It is obvious that we want to selectively stimulate the phase II enzyme system.

Elagic Acid Does That!
 Elagic acid is what we call a nonfunctional stimulator of the phase II enzyme system. It is this stimulation which can also be characterized as anti-oxidant potential. Elagic acid disarms cancer causing agents before they can harm your DNA.

Elagic acid ferociously attacks cancer cells anywhere in your body, thus helping your immune system destroy these cancerous cells and shutting off their ability to multiply, divide and reproduce. The elagitanins cause programmed cell death or apoptosis of the cancer cells.

Elagitannins & Raspberry Seeds Cosmeceuticals

Raspberries contain one of the most powerful antioxidants known- a series of elagitanins that are converted into elagic acid in the stomach. The seed of the raspberry contains more elagitanins than the fruit, however if it is not ground into bioavailable flour, it passes through the body with little benefit. The bioavailable flour frees the elagitanins for immediate absorption and transformation into elagic acid in the body. Many fruits contain elagitanins, however, raspberry elagitanins are one of the only fruits that have been clinically shown to be transformed into beneficial levels of elagic acid in the body. The health benefits of raspberries, including cancer prevention, are described in the American Cancer Society's book Complimentary and Alternative Cancer Methods.

The elagitanins content of raspberry seeds varies dramatically with the variety of the berry. The highest levels of elagitanins are found in the Meeker Variety of raspberry. SMDI has selected a processor who guarantees us greater than 90%+ Meeker and are willing to control their raw material stream to satisfy our strict nutraceutical requirements. SMDI's Meeker Variety Raspberry Seed products contain the highest amount of elagitanins available in nature per dollar spent.

There has been much research into elagic acid, its value as a potent anti oxidant and its value in fighting cancer is widely accepted. Elagic acid has been shown to keep cancer cells from dividing and multiplying and eventually kills the cancer. The elagic acid has been quite successful against esophageal, breast, colon, prostate and skin cancer. Elagitanins may also lead to cholesterol reduction and its anti-fungal, anti-viral, anti-bacterial properties have been attributed to weight loss, slowing gum recession and many other benefits.
